

February 2005

Volume 10

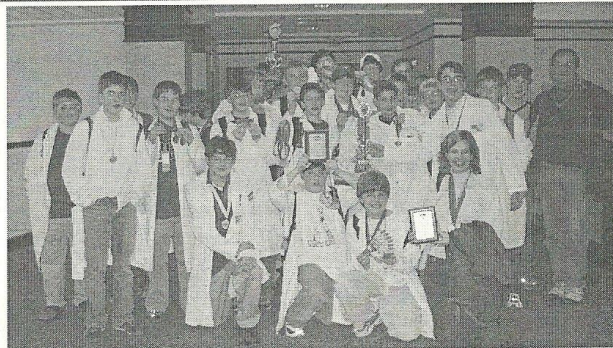

Issue 3

"We Are the Champions!"

Somehow, it still doesn't convey the meaning!

by Zach Sternberg

The Red Army Corps of Engineers went to regions on the 19th of February, taking 1st Place. This was the Junior School's second year in Science Olympiad. Last year, they placed 3rd at Regions. After many test flights and designs, Andrew Holmgren placed 1st in Bottle

Olympians celebrate their first place success.

Rockets. Patrick Clarke took 3rd in this event for the B team. In Dynamic Planet, Chunbum Park and Robert McNeilly placed 1st for the A team, and Austin Archer and J.B. Hardin placed 5th for B team. Clayton Cothran and Karl Mecklenborg placed 1st for the A team in Road Scholar. In Robo-Billiards, Zach Sternberg placed 1st for the A team, but had a battery short circuit and melt parts of the controller. It was smokin'! Clayton Cothran and Robert

Continued on Page 2

Media Day

by Daniel Green

On Wednesday, February 9, the eighth graders spent a fun-filled Media Day at Harpeth Hall. The day started well with a late arrival of 8:45 to 9:00. After students enjoyed a bit of socializing in the auditorium, the program began. Our speaker was media specialist, Frank

Patrick Crum and Callie Blackburn, future marketing executives

Baker. He outlined the basic script and thought process of a commercial maker. This outline included what occurs as audio and visual and also camera lighting, angles, sound effects, dramatic visuals, etc in an advertisement. Then he moved on to influences through media. We were shown a commercial for cell phones and discussed the
Continued on Page 3

February 2005

Page 1

Science Olympiad

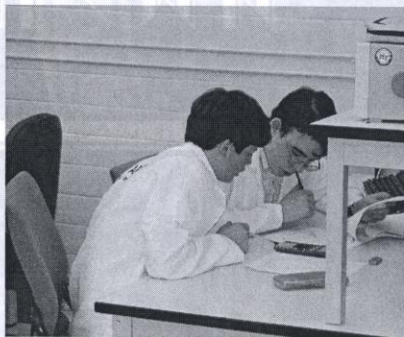

Continued from Page 1

McNeilly placed 1st in Storm the Castle, a trebuchet event. In a new event, Compute This, Nicholas Caprioli and Zach Sternberg placed 2nd for the A team. In Naked Egg Drop, there was a tiebreaker between the A and B teams. B team's Neil Ryan and Richard Wall placed first, having the A team's Richard Putnam and Shep Patterson

Clayton Cothran and Wyatt Redd placed 2nd for the A team. In Fossils, A team's Mitchell Lukens and Gray Taylor placed 3rd. In Robert McNeilly and Nicholas Caprioli Reach for the Stars.

and Chunbum Park placed

Sister Act??

fall into 2nd. This happened again in Experimental Design, with A team's Clayton Cothran, Karl Mecklenborg, and Chunbum Park placing 2nd, and B team's Kevin Carr and Patrick Sweeney taking the gold. In Science of Fitness,

3rd for the A team, and B team's Kevin Carr and Patrick Sweeney placed 6th. In Reach for the Stars, an Astronomy event, Nicholas Caprioli and Robert McNeilly placed 3rd for the A team. They were ravaging through everyone's science books to find how to make a chart that ended up having directions on the back of the test! In Sounds of Music, A team's Vic Goetz and Wyatt Redd placed 3rd with their duets between an oversized xylophone and a PVC flute. The A team then went on taking 4th place in Awesome Aquifer with contestants Gray Taylor and Vic Goetz. Richard Putnam and Matt Vanek placed 4th in Mission Possible for the A team. Their contraption broke on the way there, and after trying to fix everything, it went out of order! In Water Quality, A team's Mitchell Lukens and Gray Taylor placed fourth. In Write it/Do it, A team's Karl Mecklenborg and Sam Page placed 4th. In Bridges, B team finished on top of the A team. The B team's Patrick Sweeney and Ben Weakley placed 2nd, and A team's Chunbum Park and Karl Mecklenborg placed 4th. The B team then came out on top of Process Skills for Life Science.

Kevin Carr, on B team, placed 4th, and A team, Zach Sternberg and Andrew Holmgren, placed 6th. In Can't Judge a Powder By Its Color, Patrick Clarke and Ben Weakley placed 3rd, while A team did not place. Overall, a team wants to have the lowest amount of points, much like cross country. The A team's total score was 93, and B team's total score was 195. Both teams combined earned 51 individual medals. Overall, Junior School Team Results include First Place, Montgomery Bell Academy Team A; Second place, Friendship Christian; Third Place, McFadden; Fourth Place, MLK; Fifth Place, Siegel Middle; Sixth Place, Harpeth Hall; Seventh Place, Thurman Francis; and Eighth Place, Montgomery Bell Academy Team B.

Zach Sternberg, Sean McKinnis, and Mitchell Lukins

Media Day

Continued from Page 1

commercial's use of the items in the outline. Next, we moved to the

Frank's first point is ... don't smoke

tobacco industry's advertising strategies. Unfortunately, we never left this topic. After our discussion, we were given a tobacco ad and split into small groups to analyze it. When we finished our analysis, we went back into the auditorium and presented the information. There were a couple of strange ads, and everyone was able to pick out the attributes supposedly given to a person if they smoke. Then it was time for a break. We were given chips or pretzels and water.

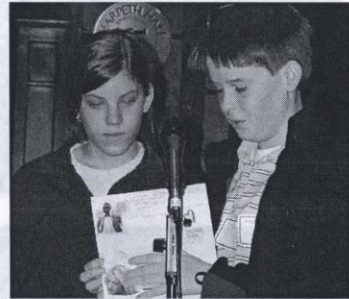

Everyone thought it was pretty funny that the water bottles had Harpeth Hall labels on them.

After a bit of additional socializing, we returned to the theater and discussed counter ads, which are "parodies" of other ads. We split up into our groups again and were given time to make a counter ad to the tobacco ad we had received earlier. Once again, we came back in and presented our counter ad. Then we had lunch: Papa John's pizza, cokes, and cookies. This was the main "mixing" time, and everyone talked with their were asked to make our own skits on tobacco. We were given an hour to make the scripts. We presented the skits on stage in the auditorium. Wyatt Redd was the stellar actor of the day with his quick, high-pitched speaking.

Knight Hammock and Kristen King

After his group's skit, the rest were pretty generic with people smoking, coughing, and falling down dead. Last were the questions. There were not very many except for a Honeybear who asked about three, but they helped to wind up the program. Then Media Day was

Will, Comor, Branson, Chris, and Grant with Honeybear group members.

friends. Again, we went into the auditorium and were shown one-minute cartoons about smoking. After about five or six of these, we over, and we left around 2:00. The day was a success and will hopefully continue as an annual activity for eighth graders.

Around Campus

"Santa, baby"

*Microbes go Military: Wesley
Wilson*

*Gray Taylor, Hicks
Woolwine, and Hayden
Redd plan their break dance routine.*

Don Orr doesn't just Fiddle on the Roof.

*Alex Martin wows
the jazz concert crowd.*

Dodgeball for Tsunami Relief

The Dodgers

John Lowe pegs his opponent.

Neil Reinhardt, a funny bunny

The Patriots

Da Ballers

The Winning Team Is

The Bunny Stampede

Oliver Oldacre, Neil Reinhardt, Steven Gaittens, Jeffrey Nutkis, Fitz Lassing

The Chunbum Page

Toy Story III

by Chunbum
Park

To the ones with young children in their families, Toy Story III would be an interesting topic. Toy Story III, in 2005 and the later years, is quite different from the cowboy and the space ranger. It is a serious matter that should be discussed. How serious is it? Back in the good old 1990s, children sought plastic robot models, dolls, Legos, airplane models, and electronic trains. I remember having a train that ran whenever I turned on the switch. I also remember the plastic robots from the K-Cops (a Korean robot police cartoon). Finally, I had a mountain made out of Legos.

Now, in the neo-2005, everything has changed. Children are not begging for the robots and dolls anymore; they have war for games, games, and more games. The addiction is common among the kids, right now; for example, it is a custom that if you go to your friend's house, you play video games – not build Legos.

Nowadays, little kids as young as three can distinguish between a real and a fake cell phone. A six-year-old boy wants an iPod for his birthday (www.nytimes.com). It may not seem an important problem, but rather a benefit danger and the robots come to save them, their creativity strengthens – they are creating what is not there. In contrast, in a computer game, you are “supposed” to do such actions by pressing “A” or “B”. If you don’t for the kids to adapt to the soon coming future; yet, “Houston, we have a problem.”

How would the elimination of plastic toys in our world affect the humans? Probably, our future generations would be less creative. In the past, when you saw boys playing, you might have conceived it as just “playing”. But, as children create situations where the humans are in shoot the enemy, you get shot. Another example is in Mario, where you’re supposed to jump over the bad mushrooms, so you do it. Therefore, no imagination is required. The scenery and the storyline are already there for you. If this “play” continues, surely, there would be mainly dummies in the future. Our future generations would not be talented in music, art, writing, etc. without the works of imagination within them. So, if you want your little brother/little sister/son/daughter to avoid such situations, buy them trains, not cell phones.

The Bigger The Better?

Airbus A380

by Zach Sternberg

On January 18th, the first Airbus 380 was showcased in France. This plane is recorded as the largest commercial airplane in existence. Compared to the Boeing 747-400, the Airbus A380 has 49% more floor space and can hold 35% more passengers. The exact number of passengers that this aircraft holds is 555 in their classes. If the whole entire airplane were one cabin with standard chairs, everyone who learns and teaches at MBA could fit inside in addition to the board of directors. This means it could hold about 850 passengers. With a full flight, this prodigious plane can fly up to 15,000 ground kilometers. For customer satisfaction, this plane can be equipped, depending on the airline, with an all out bar and lounge, couches, and Sky Beds. Beneath the deck, there are crèches, crew rest areas, sleeping cabins, and lavatories. Now, some people ask, "How big is it?" In length, it is 239 feet, 3 inches. That is about 15 Hummer H2s lined up bumper to bumper. How high? It is 79 feet, 7 inches, which is about 233 40GB iPod Photos stacked longwise on top of each other. The A380 runs on Rolls-Royce Trent 900 engines or GP7200 engines from The Engine Alliance (a General Electric and Pratt & Whitney joint venture). So far, there have been 129 orders for this plane including 17 Freighter versions. It is compatible with 60 airports, for it has a massive size and requires custom skyways, compatible runways, and service cars are all needed to accommodate this plane. The Airbus A380 will be in service in 2006 and the A380F (freighter) in 2008.

The Cherub Angel

by Harrison

Stringfellow

Angel is the beloved female Cocker Spaniel at Mr. Woolsey's house. Angel has beautiful golden fur. She was obtained in October of 2003, which was about two months after she was born in August for the 25th anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Woolsey. She was about to be named Silver because of the anniversary, but she had the most beautiful angel eyes with flowing eyelashes, so she was named Angel. She lives a pleasant life inside which includes monthly grooming, and sometimes she goes for walks. When she hears, "Want to go," she immediately bolts to the door and waits. Angel definitely lives the good life!

*Daddy Pat, could you bring me a cool beverage?
And rub my back?*

Best of the Bands

Best Music of 2004

Rap is NOT music by Hicks Woolwine

2004 was a great year for music. Many new artists have emerged with great songs and fat-selling records. But some of these somewhat new artists have actually been around for a while, such as Modest Mouse and Switchfoot, never achieving the success that they deserved.

Modest Mouse has been making albums for the past ten years, although no one has known about them until their latest songs "Float On" and "Ocean Breathes Salty" (two of my favorite songs of all time). This is because they are considered Indie Rock, which is a type of rock that involves little professional aid, low budgets, and small record companies. They are now receiving the recognition they deserve.

Franz Ferdinand, a new artist, has appeared and has hit the charts with their popular song "Take Me Out." They are based in Scotland, so some of their music might not make a whole lot of sense, but it is good overall. They have a very artistic feel, shown in the music video for "Take Me Out," which shows many strange robotic contraptions. They are continuing to grow in popularity, having already achieved a performance on the Grammys.

Green Day is not a new artist, but their new CD, American Idiot, though a little liberal (ok very liberal), is a masterpiece. This CD is considered their "sell out" because they have departed from their 70s punk style. With hits like "Boulevard of Broken Dreams" and being the winner of the best rock album Grammy, this is one of the best albums of the year. One of the songs on the album, a mini-rock opera called "Jesus of Suburbia" is one of my favorite songs.

The Killers are a new band with a different sounding rock. Their songs "Somebody Told Me" and "Mr. Brightside" have already hit the charts. They have many other good songs on mix of guitar and bass.

Crossfade, one of the biggest rock groups at the moment, released their first album not long ago, with much success from their singles "Cold" and "So Far Away," both being high on the rock charts. This group will most likely be one of the best rock groups of this decade.

Pax 217, an unknown Christian band, had a small EP called Check Your Pulse, only available on their website. Though obscure and unknown, it is one of the best works of 2004. Though it features only five songs, each is a masterpiece, especially the song "Check Your Pulse" (also one of my favorite songs of all time). I encourage the purchase of this Christian artist, even if you are not Christian because the music is good and the message is universal, not just for one religion.

Jimmy Eat World received a major plus with their release of their album Futures, which features great songs like "Pain" and "Work." These capture rock at one of its best moments, with screeching guitar solos and chanting choruses. Jimmy Eat World is one of the Best Bands of 2004.

Switchfoot, like Modest Mouse, has not received any recognition for their past albums, mainly because they are a Christian group. They have broken through to mainstream with their songs "Meant to Live" and "Dare You To Move." Those of you who like

Pax 217

Green Day

their album, Hot Fuss, such as "Jenny Was a Friend of Mine," all with a good

Best of the Bands

Switchfoot

album though. The reason these were not released is because they are all ten minutes long. Overall, they are a good band musically (though some hate the singer, who sometimes sings like a woman).

Last on this list is Incubus!!!!!!! Incubus has made their sell-out album, A Crow Left of the Murder, one of the best albums I have ever heard. It features such songs as "Megalomaniac," these songs probably never realized that they are a Christian band. This demonstrates that Christian bands can actually be good sometimes, so do not avoid them.

"Talk Shows on Mute" (one of my favs), and "Sick Sad Little World" (featuring a 4-minute guitar solo!).

Coheed and Cambria, though their album was released in late 2003, is one of the best groups of 2004 because their music has just now taken flight on the radio. With their high-pitched singer, they can be very scary at times, but they are usually pretty good. Their songs "A Favor House Atlantic" and "Blood Red Summer" have become big rock hits. They have better songs on their

Incubus

This entire album has absolutely no bad songs and was Grammy nominated. Incubus's new album rocks inside and out more than you can imagine (unless you already have it!). Incubus is one of the best artists of 2004.

List of Bands (in no order):

1. Modest Mouse
2. Franz Ferdinand
3. Green Day
4. The Killers
5. Crossfade
6. Pax 217
7. Jimmy Eat World
8. Incubus
9. Switchfoot
10. Coheed and Cambria

Announcing The Rascoe Bond Davis Creative Writing Competition

Categories: Poetry and Fiction
Prizes:

1st place: $50

2nd place: $35

3rd place: $10

Please turn in all entries with a hard copy and an electronic copy to
Mrs. Bourland or
Mrs. Pettus by April 1, 2005

MBA's Answer to Dear Abby

Moral Dilemmas and the French Connection

by Wyatt Redd

He can solve all your problems, right? God forbid you should take care of yourself for once. You always have to get others to solve things for you, so "AskWyatt."

Dear Wyatt,

You're so successful, could you give me some advice so that I might be successful too?

Sincerely,

Jim from Brentwood, UK

Felicitations Jim,

I have some tips for you, so if you happen to be lucky enough you can have an advice column too. That's the best job in the world, helping lazy guys such as yourself become successful and take your job and promotion opportunities while you rot in a third-rate job writing for a paper. Yeah, that pays well. Anyway, this is what you should do: Avoid other people (they're high in cholesterol), keep a big tub of "Jell-O" by your bed, set your alarm clock to go off every hour, and when it does, stick your head in the "Jell-O" and yell "Boy am I tired!" Finally, beware the advice of successful people because they do not seek company.

Good luck Jim,

Wyatt Redd (he's the best)

Dear Wyatt,

I am faced with a moral dilemma — I am a jewel thief. I have always wanted to steal the Heart of the Ocean. However, I saw the movie Titanic and the moving scene where the old lady drops it off the boat makes me feel bad about taking it. What should I do?

Your friend,

Bob from Paris, France

You would really take this person's advice?

Bob,

First of all, Frenchy, I am not your friend, so don't insult me like that. Second what was up with the lady dropping the jewel off the boat? That thing was worth millions. If she doesn't want it, she could at least give it to someone else. Finally in response to your question, steal it, you gutless weenie.

Not your friend,

Wyatt from America, the greatest country on earth

HAPPY 50TH TO MR. GIOIA

Grab Bag

Sports Quiz

by Kenji Alexander

Alex Apple was the winner last time and, like Will Andrews, got two $10 gift certificates to Regal Cinemas. But if anyone can get all of them right this time, they get a $50 gift certificate to Toys 'R Us. Good luck!

This Issue's Questions

1. Who were the two quarterbacks inducted into the Pro Football Hall of Fame in 1963?
2. What is Denver Nuggets player Nene's real first and last name?
3. Who was the 861st pick in the 2001 MLB Draft?
4. What was Rodney Peete's NFL passer rating in 2002?
5. Who had the best record in the Western Division of the NBA in the 1952-53 season?
6. This past season, who had the best record in baseball's Arizona fall League?
7. Who was the 58th overall pick in the 1988 NFL Draft?
8. How many points per game did Jo Jo White have during the 1971-72 NBA season?
9. Who led major league baseball in home runs in 1875?
10. Who had the NFL's best passer rating in 1977?

Here are the answers to the last Sports Quiz:

1. Cotton Bowl
2. Jay Cutler
3. Orlando Magic
4. Washington Huskies
5. David Carr
6. Ron Artest
7. Jim Mora Jr.
8. Rudy Tomjanovich (at the time; now Frank Hamblen)
9. Candace Parker
10. Auburn Tigers, Virginia Tech Hokies

Soul Food

at Swett's

by Daniel White

Swett's, an historic institution of fine food nestled in the heart of Nashville, is one of my favorite restaurants. Started in 1954, this restaurant has served doctors, preachers, lawyers, and celebrities. (I have seen Little Richard and Jeff Rutledge there.)

Fried chicken NOT SERVED at Swett's.

They serve food such as fried chicken, macaroni and cheese, greens, porkchops and gravy, meatloaf, yams, green beans, fried cornbread, rolls, chocolate cake, and the best cobbler in town. Swett's is located on 2525 Clifton Avenue in the heart of Nashville, less than a mile from Tennessee State University. Come to Swett's and you won't be sorry.

Daniel would enjoy this chicken.

Music

Apple releases the revised iPod lineup

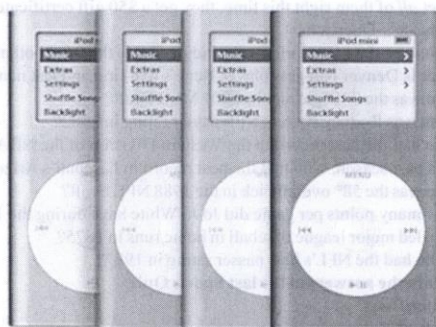

by Nicholas Caprioli

On Wednesday, February 23, 2005, Apple released the new iPod mini and two revised iPod photos. The iPod mini revision comes to upgrade the player to an optional 6GB hard drive. The base model is the 4GB hard drive at $199, and the 6GB hard drive is $249. In addition, the iPod 40GB has been discontinued, and in its place, a 30GB iPod Photo has been added. The difference between an iPod and an iPod photo is that the iPod photo has a color screen on it that is ideal for viewing (you guessed it) photos. The 20GB iPod will remain available. In addition, the iPod photos saw a price drop. The 30GB photo is at $349 and the 60GB photo at $449.

For those of you who might have been under the knife and missed the iPod Shuffle, here is the wrap up. The iPod shuffle is a flash based mp3 player. A flash-based player means that, similar to a camera system, the player takes a "picture"

The new iPod mini.

Now starting at $199

4GB and new 6GB models.

18-hour battery life. Charge over USB 2.0.

Available in silver and three new colors.

The new iPod photo.

Now starting at $349

60GB and new 30GB models.

Sync your music and photos.

Charge over USB 2.0.

(flash-player) if the files you want on it and re-reads that image over and over again. All other iPods are hard drive based players. (That should be self-explanatory.) They are available in either 512MB or in a 1GB model at $899 and $149 respectively. These players are ideal for athletics because they have no moving part.

The NFL

Super Bowl Sunday

by Ben Mecklenborg
The Game

If you are living under a rock and happened to miss the Super Bowl, here are some game highlights.

The coin toss was won by Philadelphia, and they chose to receive. On the very first play of the game, Donovan McNabb almost got sacked and was forced to throw the ball away. New England was off to an amazing start. On the third play, Donovan McNabb fumbled, but it was challenged and the call was reversed. Terrell Owens had a 30-yard catch plus an additional 15 yards for a New England penalty. Later, New England retaliated by sacking Donovan McNabb for a 16 yards loss. Tom Pingston had an amazing 30-yard catch to answer Terrell's earlier catch. In the second quarter, LJ Smith had a touchdown for New England, but was answered by a D. Givins touchdown for Philadelphia. Then there was a 27-yard catch by Deion Branch and was followed by a touchdown by Vrabel for New England. Later Westbrook gave the Eagles another touchdown. Then Dillon reacted with a touchdown of his own. New England confirmed their win with a Greg Lewis touchdown. Deion Branch was the MVP. He had 11 catches for 133 yards!

It wasn't the best Super Bowl I had ever seen, but it was entertaining and had some good plays. The Patriots won not only because of defense, but also a superior offense. The Eagles have five great players, but they don't have much of a well rounded team because of the cost of TO and Donovan McNabb. I have to say the Eagles did a good job to stay in the game, but their best just wasn't good enough.

The Best Commercials

1. Bloody Cat: A guy was making dinner for his girl friend when his cat jostled a pot with spaghetti sauce in it. The cat jumped down into the sauce which splattered all over it. Then the guy picked the cat up with a knife in his other hand, and his girlfriend walked in and it looked like a cat killing.

2. Diet Pepsi: P-Diddy had to get to an award show. His car broke down and he hitched a ride in a Pepsi truck. Other people including X-Zibbit showed off their new Pepsi trucks.

3. Quarterbacks on Broadway: Aspiring Super Bowl MVP's, including Steve McNair and Ben Rotlessburger, sang "Tomorrow" from the Broadway hit Annie.

The Simpsons

"The Simpsons" episode after the Super Bowl started with Homer trying to beat

Bart at games at a carnival. When Homer finally beat Bart, he started to do an outrageous dance. He was put on the news for doing the dance, and people like Tom Brady hired Homer to choreograph their touchdown dances! The dances became famous, and Homer was asked to do the Super Bowl half-time show. Homer had a mental block and the only thing he could think of was inspired by his overly religious neighbors. He ended up having a Half Time Show Bible reading from the Old Testament. Homer is humiliated, thus ending his career as a choreographer. Some of the better aspects include a desperate attempt by Homer to remove a GO BENGALS tattoo from his stomach.

MVP Deion Branch

Basketball

A Strong Finish Seventh Grade Basketball

by Michael Seitz

Starting November 1st, the seventh grade basketball season finally came to a close after a long, solid, tiring three months. Except for an extremely close game against a team with a fifteen and a half year old and an early game with Lipscomb which was played without MBA's starting point guard, the team remained undefeated. In fact, the team won every one of their games by more than fifteen points. Behind co-captains Tyler Paslick and Alex Apple, high scoring center Fitz Lassing and other key players John Lowe, Tee Griscorn, Michael Seitz, and Luke Colbert, the team, through hard work, came together tremendously. By practicing each and every school day for a grueling two hours, working hard as a team over weekends and Christmas break, and doing their weekend "shooting documentation," the already talented team's momentum was somewhat boosted. Forced to remember their six pieces of clothing for each and every one of their eighteen season games, the team threw their shot fakes, "got after it," wiped the smiles off their faces, stayed mentally prepared, and were able to buckle down to finish out the season strongly following their coaches' advice. Highlights from the season included clobbering victories over public schools

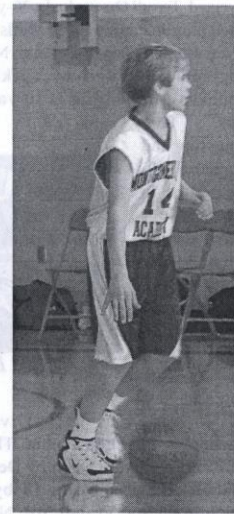

Brentwood Middle, Woodland, Grassland, and Page, along with two feel-good dominating wins over rival Brentwood Academy. The team's greatest moment, though, came with a satisfactory win over Lipscomb, when the team was truly able to get revenge on the undefeated team and feel good about taking home the end-of-season tournament trophy.

Boxing out for the rebound.

Luke Colbert

George Curtis

Basketball

Steady Improvement

Eighth Grade Basketball

by Coaches Gary Waller and Virginia Bakken

The 2004-05 MBA eighth grade basketball team had a very successful season. The team finished the year with a 13-8 record. Highlights of the season included giving Brentwood Academy its only loss of the regular season 55-49. Also, on February 3, after losing to Ensworth two weeks earlier, the Big Red defeated the Tigers in a come from behind effort 45-39. Outside of the HVAC, MBA swept eventual TNT tournament champion David Lipscomb 43-39 and 47-30. MBA placed 3rd in the Overbrook Holiday Tournament, 3rd in the HVAC regular season, and 3rd in the HVAC tournament. This record met their primary goal of improving throughout the season. The team was led by captains Drew Turner and Patrick Crum. High scorers of the season were Patrick Crum and Joseph Sloan.

Drew drives around Joseph's screen.

Reggie and Joseph

Phantom of the hardwood

The Back Page

Shep Patterson works on his plane for Science Olympiad Wright Stuff.

Editor-in-Chief. . .Knight Hammock
Production Manager. . .Nicholas Caprioli
Entertainment Editor. . .Sam Page
Sports Editor. . .Wade Longmire
Features Editor. . .Wyatt Redd
Copy Editor. . .Karl Mecklenborg
Faculty Sages. . .Mrs. Bourland and Mrs. Pettus